I hope this finds you having a pretty darned good Monday. Today I have a little gift for you! More on that in a bit, first, I wanted to remind you about our 10-month offer! That is good for a FREE gift from me of a new book or magazine of your choice. If you're interested, click here to get your offer. Let's start with a little story. About a year ago I went through the old box of books I have here on the farm, each of which belonged to my dad when I was a kid. I found a lot of books I hadn't looked at in years. One book, I remembered at once.

It was this one, and the only reason I remembered is because the cover showed me a daddy long legs beetle that was preening and making his big hairy body look really cute. So when I saw it in the box, I realized that it was an old American Arachnology magazine of the "bug of the week" variety, which I loved when I was a kid. So I bought it, and I thought it was kind of cool to have a used magazine from way back in the 1970's. After looking at it for a while, I realized how many of the photos were of insects I've never seen in real life. And since I love arachnology, I decided to share it with you. Click the link below to see what I found! There are a few ways to take a picture of bugs, including a macro 82157476af
